Council Approves New TYA Contract

rith substantial gains for union members, a new four-year Theatre for Young Audiences (TYA) contract was approved by Council on August 18, 2015.

The Producers' League of Theatre for Young Audiences, or PLOTYA, which represents 18 employers, met with Equity representatives from June 8-12. Senior Business Representative and Equity's Chief Negotiator for this contract Beverly Sloan called the meetings "positive negotiations that reinforced Equity's commitment to work with PLOTYA in creating theater and helping to develop theater audiences for the future."

In addition to salary increments for dance captains and understudies, members performing on the TYA contract will see a 3% increase in pay in each of the first two years, with an additional 2%, or cost of living adjustment, in both years three and four.

Both stage managers and assistant stage managers will now be compensated separately for work outside their traditional stage management responsibilities and the tech week increments will now be based on contractual salary rather than contract minimum. Dance captains and understudies will also see big boosts to the increments paid for those functions, a 50% increase for dance captains and nearly a 100% increase for understudies.

Equity also gained significant traction with health care Producers will pay health contributions on a per performance contract for actors who work 30 hours or more in a week.

"For actors working on the per performance contract, the door to health care has been cracked after more than 20 years of being firmly closed." Sloan said.

The union also garnered big strides when it comes to safe and sanitary conditions for its members. Now, if performers are required to work on an inclined stage of ½ inch or greater, a qualified instructor - such as a physician or physical therapist will give instruction on the best way to work on an incline to avoid injury.

"The TYA contract has grown from the union's 'baby' over the past twenty plus years to a mature agreement that provides a great many work weeks for our members," said Julia Breanetta Simpson, chair of the TYA Negotiating Team. "This negotiation truly reflected the ongoing partnership between the union and the producers with increased benefits for the membership while helping to ensure the producers the ability to continue to provide this valuable work.

Audition Tips From Behind the Piano (Part II)

By Andrew Gerle

he million dollar question: why are so many actors forgotten before they've left the room? And why do so many actors feel like they gave a good audition and did what they were supposed to do, yet didn't get called back? The answer is the thing that enrages me the most, far beyond crumpled, single-sided music and poorly marked cuts: It's the idea that being prepared and singing well is enough. It's just not. You have to offer up the one thing you have that no one else has: vou.

Yes, the actor that gets cast has to have the notes, be somewhere in the vicinity of age and look and have technical acting ability. But an audience member has given up several hours of his or her evening, not to mention quite a bit of money, to spend it with a bunch of strangers on a stage. They (and therefore, the tablepeople) are looking for actors who make them care, people for whom they can root. They want to be moved.

So how on earth do you give them that in five minutes (if you're lucky) in a rehearsal studio? Show us the true you, the messy vou, the vulnerable vou, show us the parts you're scared to show. show us the parts you think only your boyfriend gets. Don't ask, "Is this the way the role is supposed to be done? Is this how the song is supposed to be sung?" Imitation is the sincerest form of mediocrity. The tablepeople don't want to see the role done exactly like they've seen it done a dozen times, and besides, that's the way the ten people before and after you will do it. Competent will not get you a callback; wellrehearsed never touched anyone's heart. As with all art, we go to the theater to discover another human being - and thereby discover ourselves. You can't give an audience that if you're aiming for merely a "correct" performance.

This means getting creative. Spend as much time honing your imagination as you do your vocal placement. Be an observer: of friends, of strangers in the subway and most of all, of yourself. Most have only considered their character's lives and stakes in a generic way -"She's sad; he's excited" — and then rely on the text to do all the work. The great ones, the actors who consistently get hired, know to the tiniest detail the life of this character and what they themselves would feel and do in their place. They draw on all their finely observed personal traits and steal others from people they know and see. The result is a vivid, real and unforgettable human living an important moment of their life in front of us. Anything less than this and you will blur into the mass of other actors up for the role.

But the good news is that this is the fun part. The joy of creating an entire world of your own, down to the meal your character ate for breakfast and the posters she has on her bedroom wall, translates into a joyful performance that's fresh and personal and quaranteed to be different from anyone else who shows up at the call. The tablepeople are desperate to be wowed by every actor who walks through the door, but it's hard to fall in love with a cardboard cutout they've seen a hundred times. Give them (and vourself) the pleasure of a threedimensional human and you won't be forgotten. Let your soul sing, not just your voice.

Always remember: An audition is a business transaction, and your most valuable commodity is you. Don't leave it in the hall or hide it under a mask of technique and diligent preparation. Lead with it. You'll be amazed at the performances it can open up for you and how much more you'll love auditioning. And that's good for everyone in the room.

See you at the piano.

Remembering a Former Councillor

eteran character actor and former Equity Councillor Bart Williams passed away in his home in Bullhead City, Arizona on June 28, 2015, after a battle with cancer. Sixty-five years old at the time of his death, Williams was a passionate Equity member and advocate for all art.

Joining the union in 1976, Williams served on numerous committees, including Developing Theatre, Membership Education and the Western Regional Board, among others. He served as Principal Councillor on the National Council from 1995 to 1999.

Working on various Equity contracts, Williams' talent was witnessed by audiences across the country. He became well known for certain roles such as FDR in Annie. He also appeared in, among many others, Show Boat, Hairspray, Man of La Mancha, The Pirates of Penzanze (he played Major General numerous times) and The Wizard of Oz (for which he also played the Wizard several times over the years).

Aside from theater, Williams was seen on the big screen in such films as Hello, Dolly!; Tunnel Vision; An Enemy of the People and The Doomsday Clock. On television, he appeared on MADtv, Good Grief and Weird Science.

One of Williams' last projects was the award-winning The Last First Comic — a documentary that he wrote, produced and codirected — about Irv Benson, who played the heckling Sidney Spritzer during Milton Berle's variety show. The documentary took home the 2011 Best Documentary title at the Backlot Film Festival.

Not just an advocate for the stage, Williams was an active member in numerous organizations celebrating arts, including The Society to Preserve and Encourage Radio Drama, Variety and Comedy; the Sons of the Desert (which is a group devoted to comedians Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy); and The Buster Keaton Society. He was more than well-known as a walking encyclopedia, filled with knowledge of theater, radio, film and television history.

Williams is survived by his brother and two nieces.

Use Your Equity Card and Save

Your Equity card is the key to hundreds of dollars in savings

Il around the country, Equity members can save on services ranging from hotels and restaurants to salons and subscriptions. And, of course, theater tickets. Partnered with two national discount programs, Union Plus and Working Advantage, Equity members — along with millions of union families — are able to save money with a flash of their union card. It's one way that a union card not only pays at work, but also at home.

The AFL-CIO created Union Plus in 1986 as a way to provide union members and their families with consumer benefits.

According to the Union Plus website, "By using the collective buying power of unions, we are able to offer valuable, discounted products and services exclusively to working families."

Through Union Plus, labor union members have access to such discounts and perks like the Union Plus Scholarship and specialized grants, insurance, retirement planning, theme park discounts and legal assistance. Members can save on anything from cell phone bills to car rentals by utilizing Union Plus. The he year was 1967. I was 21 years old and had been dancing with ballet companies for five years. I had danced for royalty in Monte Carlo, played a gun-toting revolutionary in Algeria and an American aristocrat at the Metropolitan Opera. Now I wanted to dance on Broadway. I asked a Broadway veteran how to get jobs on the Great White Way, and he told me to "audition for everything" until people got to know me. And though I had great trepidation about performing in a war zone, I took his advice and went to the open call for the Vietnam tour of Hello,

Labor Day, Unions for Artists and the Value of Unity

By Kate Shindle

epending on whether vou still receive a hard copy or have "gone green" with our online delivery, this month's Equity News will reach you either just before or just after Labor Day.

On the annual calendar of American holidays, most are pretty easy to understand at a glance. Labor Day, though, is something of an outlier. It's more often recognized as the unofficial end of summer — or referenced by those who treasure their traditions as the day to pack up their white clothes - than identified as a celebration of and homage to the working men and women of our nation.

Here at Equity, we take Labor Day very seriously. Our union, of course, had not yet been founded when the first Labor Day was commemorated on September 5, 1882. It would be another fourteen years until Equity's predecessor, the Actors' Society, sought to distinguish between "responsible and irresponsible" managers and began a decades-long pursuit of a charter from the American Federation of Labor. As Robert Simonson points out in Equity's centennial history Performance of the Century, "by the 1910s, working conditions had become unendurable. Actors were not paid for rehearsal. They were made to buy their own costumes. They were abandoned when shows failed on the road. Contracts were regularly broken by unscrupulous producers." On May 26, 1913, Actors' Equity was born. But it wasn't until August 1919 that a month-long strike galvanized actors in eight cities and won support from the AFL, IATSE, the AFM, and many others. Actors, we who spend most of our lives competing with one another for employment, became galvanized by the knowledge that unity and solidarity create more favorable conditions for

Obviously, our industry has changed dramatically since those early days, as has our union. What began with 112 actors at the Pabst Grand Circle Hotel on 59th Street has now grown to an association with more than 50,000, working dozens of contracts and codes in hundreds of theaters across America. In addition to salaries and work rules. Equity regularly bargains for better health care, pension coverage and retirement fund contributions. Equity members had 292,712 paid work weeks for the 2013-14 season alone, and nearly 5,000 new work weeks were added. By nearly every metric, the first hundred years of Actors' Equity were a resounding success.

But as much as things change, of course, there are also things that stay the same. Equity will always be unique among labor unions, because the work we seek is unpredictable and often ephemeral, and the hiring process is intensely subjective. Even our sister stage unions have a much more robust supply of jobs. A spot op can light pretty much any show that requires a spotlight; a violinist can play any show where violin is necessary. But no matter how carefully and thoroughly I refine my skills. I know that there are many shows in which there is simply no role for me to

Finally, there will always be those who argue against the value of unions for actors: because they feel that union membership somehow denigrates artistic integrity, because they believe actors to be incapable of selflessness and collaboration in the pursuit of the common good, or most often - because they seek to divide us and deprive us of the power we have found through collective bargaining and solidarity. They ask our deputies to negotiate directly with management, because it's easier to intimidate one actor or stage manager than it is to pull a fast one on the business and contract reps who work on behalf of all of us. They remind us, in ways spoken and unspoken, to be grateful above all for the performance opportunities they provide, and how many others would be happy to have our jobs if we prove too "difficult." And they point the finger at Equity's rules and regulations when workplace conditions become a challenge. Because if there's one thing that the more unscrupulous forces in our business can agree on, it's that conditioning our members to distrust their own union makes it easier to get around the rules institution. But one of my priorities over these three vears is to build an environment in which our actors and stage managers feel comfortable asking questions. The staff and officers of this association have no goal aside from looking out for our members. We do. of course, have to keep an eye on the bigger picture and maintain an institutional knowledge that may guide our decisions in a counterintuitive way - which is really just a fancy way of saying that our members will sometimes question Equity's decisions. And that's fine; in my experience, shutting down discussion and dissent is a remarkably effective shortcut to the land of institutional failure. It is our job to recognize the ways in which concessions in Colorado can affect our members in Louisiana, even though they seem like different markets with little in common. And it is also our duty to operate in good faith, with as much transparency as possible. Fortunately, I can't personally identify a better way to operate. Although we obviously have to eventually make decisions, I find discussion and debate tremendously exciting.

I am grateful to those pioneers who, a hundred-plus years ago, gathered in a Manhattan hotel united by one common belief: that an actor's desire to create art does not supersede the right to be treated fairly, the chance to be compensated for our efforts, or the regard for ourselves as valuable creative collaborators rather than simply work for hire. If you want to know more about Equity and become part of the process, I welcome your participation. And if you want to be inspired this Labor Day, I strongly recommend Alfred Harding's terrific book The Revolt of the Actors. As we determine together where we will go from here, it's great to remind ourselves where we have been, and what we have ore than 200 lovable, adoptable dogs and cats, the brightest stars of Broadway and the fans who love them gathered in Shubert Alley on July 11, 2015, for the 17th annual edition of Broadway Barks.

This year's event was hosted by Broadway Barks cofounder and Equity member

Bernadette Peters, who was joined for the day by special guest host and member Andrew Rannells (1). Broadway Barks, which is produced by Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS, is presented in collaboration with the Mayor's Alliance for NYC's Animals, a coalition of 150 nonprofit shelters and rescue groups working to reduce the number of homeless cats and dogs at city shelters by finding them safe, forever homes.

The most anticipated part of the day for many is the annual parade of adoptable pets presented by more than 70 of Broadway and Off-Broadway's best. The stars, including Aladdin's James Monroe Iglehart and Jonathan Freeman (2), Robert Fairchild and Brandon Uranowitz from An American in Paris (3) and the cast of Fun Home (4), introduced each of the 28 shelters and rescue groups represented at the event and urged the audience to adopt a new friend. All told, more than 100 furry friends of all ages and varieties are now happy as a beloved part of new families. Since 1998, more than 1,800 previously homeless dogs and cats have been adopted.

The afternoon also included a special performance by member Jessica Keenan Wynn, currently starring in Beautiful: The Carole King Musical, who dedicated "He's Sure the Boy I Love" to Romeo, a delightful top-hat wearing bulldog. (5)

Equity member Lena Hall of Hedwig and the Angry Inch, made a surprise appearance to announce she just adopted a puffy Pomeranian from the Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons.

"I lost my dog a few weeks ago and my heart was broken," Hall said. "I came here today to find a new friend and I'm taking her with me. Meet my new daughter, Piper."

"I am so happy that the Broadway community has embraced Broadway Barks and the blessing of adopting shelter animals, as well as the importance of spaying and neutering," said Broadway favorite Peters. "It's a very sweet day for us all, but especially for the many animals once abandoned or left to fend for themselves that are now rescued and made welcome some place safe and warm."

For more information about Broadway Barks or how you can adopt a shelter animal, go to BroadwayBarks.com.

Play House kicks off its 100th Season. The centennial season promises to build upon what has been one of CPH's most exciting years

This past January, CPH was honored to be named one of Fodor Travel's "10 Best Regional Theaters in the United States." Then, in June, Artistic Director Laura Kepley and Managing Director Kevin Moore accepted the 2015 Regional Theatre Tony Award on behalf of the company. In her acceptance speech, Kepley reaffirmed CPH's values of artistry, community and lifelong learning: "At age 100, we are as determined as ever to tell stories that matter; to nurture artists in every stage of their careers; to create thrilling, bold and necessary new work; and to develop innovative education programs that help our young people grow and prosper."

This summer, CPH was proud to be part of the host committee for the Theatre Communications Group National Conference. Game Change, TCG's 25th national conference, brought an estimated 1,000 industry professionals to Cleveland. The three-day conference provided a unique opportunity to highlight Cleveland's tremendous revitalization in recent years, due in part to Playhouse

In addition to CPH celebrating its historical season, the Case Western Reserve University/Cleveland Play House MFA Acting Program is celebrating its 20th Anniversary Season. As part of their three years of education and training in the program, eight students have opportunities to perform in CPH mainstage productions on an Equity contract; upon graduation, they become members of the union.

In recognition of the Play House's commitment to education, the U.S. Department of Education recently granted the company two million dollars for the Compassionate Arts Remaking Education program, which incorporates theater techniques to improve the social and emotional learning skills of Cleveland's young people. From student matinee performances of mainstage shows and the University Hospital's Rainbow Babies & Children's Hospital Classroom Matinee: A Touring Program, to the KeyBank CPH College program for high school students and the professional apprenticeship program for college graduates, CPH aims to bring theater education to a diverse cross-section of people.

Looking ahead to the 100th Season, CPH has programmed an eclectic mix of mainstage shows. The season opens with the world premiere of Ken Ludwig's A Comedy of Tenors, a delightful new farce from the acclaimed playwright of Lend Me a Tenor. Developing new work is one of CPH's top priorities: Ken Ludwig's A Comedy of Tenors debuted as a reading in the 2015 New Ground Theatre Festival.

Also coming up this season, Kepley will direct The Crucible; holiday classic A Christmas Story returns; Little Shop of Horrors brings a book musical back to CPH's stages; and contemporary playwrights Katori Hall, Rebecca Gilman and Cleveland native Rajiv Joseph will all make their CPH mainstage debuts.

Cleveland Play House is privileged to have inspired, stimulated and entertained diverse audiences in Northeast Ohio for 100 years by producing plays and theater education programs of the highest professional standards — and the company looks forward to serving the community for another 100 years.

A Powerful Partnership

Partnering with Susan G. Komen, Menopause The Musical launches The Survivor Tour to benefit the organization this fall.

Since 1982 Susan G. Komen has invested more than $2.6 billion in research, screening. treatment, education and support programs for people affected by breast cancer. The Survivor Tour, which features a cast of breast cancer survivors and co-survivors, will donate no less than $2 per ticket sold to Komen to further its mission to save lives and end breast cancer.

The Survivor Tour cast includes Equity members Teri Adams, Judy Blue and Megan Cavanagh as well as performer Linda Boston.

"Menopause has always been a cause-based show," said Musical Director Seth Greenleaf. "The cause was helping women see that what they are

"We are there to represent and share the joy of surviving cancer and winning today's battle," said cast and Equity member Judy Blue. "That is a purpose for coming back to the show, for me, after 6 years (even more than the appreciated, great Equity contracts for women over 40) is sharing the show and talking with the audience. And for some, dancing when you thought that might never happen again. It's good. And of course, the funds going to Susan G. Komen and all of the organization's good work is a bonus."

Equity Marches in NYC's First Annual Disability Pride Parade

"We will roll and ride and walk together for a more just New York City," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio at the start of the city's first annual Disability Pride Parade on July 12, 2015.

Standing with thousands of individuals and organizations, members of Actors' Equity Association marched down Broadway from Madison Square Park to Union Square in honor of the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"As a proud member of Actors' Equity Association, I was very excited to learn that Equity was participating in New York City's first ever Disability Pride Parade, I was born with Spina Bifida, the most common

The Winter's Tale Raises Funds for Season of Concern

First Folio Theatre's cast of The Winter's Tale used the final week of its outdoor run to make a company collection for Season of Concern an organization that provides compassionate care to those in the theater industry who are experiencing the effects of catastrophic illness, including HIV/AIDS.

With a post-show appeal from Equity actors Kevin McKillip (Leontes), Melissa

Carlson (Hermione), Kevin Theis (Polixenes), Kyle Haden (Camillo), Michael Joseph Mitchell (Antigonus) and stage manager Julia Zayas-Melendez, the cast was able to raise $1,130 for the Chicago-area charity.

According to its website, "Since 1987, Season of Concern has distributed over $2.5 million to 35 different Chicago-based AIDS service organizations, including AIDS Legal Council of Chicago, Chicago Women's AIDS Project, and The Children's Place. These direct-care grant awards are distributed annually and support a variety of essential programs and services for those in the Chicago community in need."

For the Third Year: Broadway Sleeps Out

On August 17, 2015, some of Broadway's biggest stars spent a night on the streets. As part of the fundraising campaign, Covenant House Sleep Out: Broadway Edition, Broadway vets like Stephanie J. Block, Audra McDonald, Laura Osnes and Chuck Cooper grabbed a sleeping bag to help raise funds and awareness for the Covenant House and the homeless youth it keeps off the street each night.

Founded in 1972, the Covenant House has branched out across North and South America helping more than 50.000 kids.

For many years, the house hosted a series of concerts titled, "A Night of Broadway Stars," where actors would perform their biggest hits as well as a song with the Covenant House youth. Once Block and Jenkins, both frequent performers at the concerts, learned of the Sleep Out program, they thought Broadway should have its night outside as well, this year marking the second edition.

The tagline for this event: "Broadway Sleeps Out so homeless youth don't have to."

"The Broadway community has wrapped their arms around our kids and our cause," said Covenant House President Kevin Ryan. "This is now the third year of the Broadway Sleep Out, and these stars not only sleep on the streets and raise money that will help us save lives, they take the time to sit with our kids, get to know them. The fact that our kids are homeless is the least interesting thing about them — so many of our kids are artists, singers, writers, filled with promise and potential. Our friends on Broadway recognize and nurture the talent and goodness of our kids, and we are so grateful for this outpouring of love from the Broadway community."

Last year, with over 80 participants, the organization raised more than $250,000. This year, with 68 people sleeping out (a total of 75 people fundraising) with a goal of surpassing last year's amount.

Dr. Barry Kohn gives a flu shot to Max Von Essen backstage at An American in Paris while cast members Jill Paice and Brandon Uranowitz lend support.

New York City & Los Angeles Free Flu Shot Program to Begin in September

About to begin its 18th year, the Annual Broadway and Off-Broadway Free Flu Shot Program will be brought to life this flu season by way of Physician Volunteers for the Arts, which is funded by Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS and sponsored by Actors' Equity Association.

Dr. Barry Kohn, Medical Director of Physician Volunteers for the Arts, will make "house calls" to Broadway and Off-Broadway shows, nonprofit theater companies, and many of the theatrical union offices to provide a flu shot to any cast, crew or staff member who requests a shot.

In addition, Kohn will be at the New York City Equity Building on the 14th Floor with free flu shots on a walk-in basis for all members of the theater community from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 25; Wednesday, Oct. 14; Monday, Nov. 9 and Thursday, Dec. 3. Dr. Kohn will also travel to Los Angeles to provide flu shots at the LA Equity office on Friday, Oct. 2 and Monday, Nov. 2 from 10 a.m. until 12 p.m.

Every winter, from late December through March, several strains of respiratory flu circulate around the world. (The best time to get a flu shot is between September and December.) These highly contagious, viral respiratory illnesses can spread rapidly through casts, crews and office staffs causing many lost workdays.

The symptoms of flu include:

high fever, chills, relentless cough, discolored sputum. hoarseness and shortness of breath. Each year, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta determines the three strains of flu most likely to circulate, and new flu vaccine is manufactured containing dead portions of these strains. Because the vaccine only contains dead portions of these viral strains. the vaccine cannot cause active flu illness. People who get the flu shot tend to develop a natural immunity to these strains of influenza. There is also some new evidence that annual flu vaccinations may decrease cardiac disease.

The flu vaccine is essential for certain high risk groups, including everyone over age 50; pregnant women; people with diabetes, heart disease, asthma, emphysema, other respiratory illnesses: immune defects; and HIV. It is also highly recommended for people who live or work with anyone at high risk, as well as for people who are exposed to large groups or work in close quarters such as backstage. The flu shot is safe for everyone except those who are allergic to eggs.

Last year, the Annual Broadway and Off-Broadway Free Flu Shot Program provided 5,474 free seasonal flu vaccinations to the Broadway and Off-Broadway community.

The cost of the flu vaccine is primarily funded by a generous $65,000 grant from Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS.

National Black Theatre Festival Message: "Join Equity, it's a Good Thing!"

August marked, and celebrated, the 14th biennial National Black Theatre Festival (NBTF). Nationally accepted as the "Black Theatre Holy Ground," this highly acclaimed festival attracts over 65,000 industry professionals and theatregoers to Winston-Salem, NC.

The NBTF was founded in 1989 by Larry Leon Hamlin, who also founded the North Carolina Black Repertory Company. Hamlin, who passed away in 2009, wanted a national festival that would acknowledge both the power of black theater and the amazing abilities and talents of black theater professionals.
Twenty-six years later, his dream has become a highly anticipated and treasured reality.

In 2009, Councillor Julia Breanetta Simpson and Business Representative Luther Goins attended the NBTF in order to find ways to make Actors' Equity a featured and important part of the festival. By hosting workshops, in-formal gatherings, meetings and creating the Larry Leon Hamlin Code (approved by Council in 2009 to support and guarantee festival participation for any and all members of color), Equity is now welcomed and considered a very important part of the festival.

Recognized as a National Celebration and Reunion of Spirit, this amazing festival opens with a star-studded gala and a glorious award presentation. The week-long festival includes productions from across the country, workshops, seminars, a new play-reading series, midnight poetry jams, actor and director networking opportunities, a solo performance series, dance and musical workshops and daily activities and workshops for children.

Equity presented two anticipated and successful workshops: "Celebrity Talk" and "Hear the Truth." "Celebrity Talk" gave selected festival celebrities the opportunity to discuss their union careers and personal journeys to future Equity members. "Hear the Truth" allowed for open discussions about when and how to join the union. It also presented the opportunity to remove many negative myths about working as a union member and about Actors' Equity as an organization.

Milk Train Stops in Houston

Houston's first ever Members' Project Code Equity showcase took place August 12-22 at Studio 101 — a staging of the seldom seen Tennessee Williams' play The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore. Though not well received when first produced in 1963, this work by the great playwright has been enjoying a bit of a rebirth. Lately its many merits, not the least being Williams' utterly undiminished mastery of poetic imagery, are being appreciated by audiences around the country.

Local Equity member, and a Williams devotee, Ron Jones directed the show, featuring members Celeste Roberts as Flora Goforth, Nick Henderson as Christopher Flanders, Joel C. Sandel as the Witch of Capri, David Grant as Rudy, with Lauren E. Smith as stage manager.

Set to the music of crooner Bobby Darin, his adventure takes him from Zen yoga to a sexy steam room before he ultimately settles for the love of one particularly cheerful dog. "Not for Me" was performed by member Corey John Snide with Equity dancers Chloe Campbell, Jacob Guzman, Lindsay Janisse, Justin Keats, Adrian Lee, Kourtni Josephine Lind and Reed Luplau along with Marc Cardarelli.

In addition to the captivating Broadway performances, the 21st edition of Fire Island Dance Festival featured dancers from American Ballet Theatre, Alvin Ailey II, Ballet Hispanico (4) and more.

The festival set a fundraising record for the fifth year in a row, besting last year's total of $533.860. In its 21 editions.

Fire Island Dance Festival has raised more than $4.3 million to help ensure that those who need it most can receive lifesaving medications and health care, nutritious meals, counseling and emergency financial assistance as provided by The Actors Fund and more than 450 AIDS and family service organizations funded by BC/EFA.
